

My son has Sensory Processing Disorder

He is often overwhelmed or confused by sensations in the world and in his body, making it hard for him to respond in many social situations. He can still hear you and understand what you are saying. Please accept a smile or nod in your direction and respect his need for space and time to understand and respond to his surroundings. I promise he is not ignoring or disrespecting you.

