

My daughter has Sensory Processing Disorder

She is often overwhelmed or confused by sensations in the world and in her body, making it hard for her to respond in many social situations. She can still hear you and understand what you are saying. Please accept a smile or nod in your direction and respect her need for space and time to understand and respond to her surroundings. I promise she is not ignoring or disrespecting you.

